Thatcher Works On New Cabinet; Foes in Disarray

By Peter Osnos

LONDON - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher began reshaping her Conservative government Friday as the opposition parties coped with the effects on their futures of her overwhelming mandate for a second term.

The final tally was 397 seats for the Conservatives, 209 seats for the Labor Party, 23 seats for the Liberal-Social Democratic alliance, and 21 seats for the small nationalist parties of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The results give the Conservatives almost three times the majority they had in the last Parliament: they now have a margin of 144 seats in the 650-seat House of

French University Reform Passed

The government says the bill is needed to make the university system more competitive, reduce overcrowding and protect certain fields from being flooded with job seekers.

6 Newsmen Denied Visas by Poland

NEW YORK (AP) — Six correspondents from Western news media have been denied visas to cover the visit of Pope John Paul II to Poland, which begins Thursday. None of the six received an explanation from Polish authorities.

Two of the correspondents were from United Press International, two from the British Broadcasting Corp. and one each from The Associated Press and Newsweek magazine. In protest, the BBC is withdrawing the television crews it had assigned to cover the pope's weeklong visit.

A Newsweek spokesman said Thursday that the magazine was appealing the decision to the Polish government. Newsweek had planned to send Andrew Nagorski, its Rome bureau chief, but will send other reporters instead, as will AP and UPI. Last summer Mr. Nagorski was expelled from Moscow, where he also represented Newsweek, on charges that included posing as a Soviet journalist. He denied the allegations.

Reagan Insists He Hasn't Cut School Funds

By Juan Williams

MINNEAPOLIS - President Ronald Reagan, engaged in what he termed "a little self-defense" against his critics, said Thursday that his administration has not cut the federal education budget and that "each budget is still bigger than the last one."

Appearing in the gymnasium of a high school that was closed last year partly because of budget carts, Mr. Reagan told a regional panel of the Commission on Excellence in Education that the federal education budget was bigger than the national defense budget. The commission released a report in April that criticized the state of Ameri-

"In 1982 the total budget for na-tional defense was $179_billion," Mr. Reagan told an audience of about 1,000. "It was $215 billion for education. And I don't fault that at all. Education is truly important and as important to our national security as defense."

The deputy White House press secretary, Larry M. Speakes, said Mr. Reagan was referring to "all spending" on education-related programs and to the volume of student loans, "not necessarily federal expenditures," in the budget numbers he cited.

Brazil Unveils Plan To Win Resumption Of IMF Aid Program

By Warren Hoge

RIO DE JANIERO - The Brazilian government has announced a series of austerity measures designed to convince the International Monetary Fund to proceed with its $4.9-billion assistance program for the country. The steps are being taken to limit the growth of the government deficit and reduce an inflation rate that is currently at a 12-month level of 118 percent. Failure by Brazil to reach agreed-upon targets in those two areas caused the IMF to delay a $411-million payment due May 31 and is to be the subject of discussion here next week between the government and agency officials.

The talks are being held at a time when other indebted nations are reporting difficulties in living up to terms of agreements signed with the IMF and suggesting that the conditions must be eased. Brazil, which has a foreign debt of $90 billion, the largest in the develop-ing world, is the first country to try to negotiate such a new agreement.

The measures announced by the national monetary council in Brasilia Thursday were not as severe as had been expected. They stepped up the pace of efforts to reduce government subsidies, imposed new taxes on the financial community and eased credit restrictions. There had been predictions that the government would cut wheat subsidies, a move that would greatly raise bread prices. No such action, however, was announced Thursday. Council officials said expected moves to make major cuts in the spending of state companies will be announced next week.

Thursday's package also did not include restrictions on the indexanacing restrictions on the muckation of the economy, which is blamed by many business and banking leaders for Brazil's spiraling inflation. Under the system, Brazilian salary increases are set semiannually by the gove-nment according to changes in the rost of living index.

The possibility of imposing restrictions on the indexing had been under intense discussion here. The decision to leave indexing restriction out of the final package represented a victory for the government officials who had argued that the social costs of such a move would be too high. Olavo Setubal, a national business leader and former mayor of São Paulo, expressed disappointment at the decision in a speech to that plants must have plans to a business group there, saying, "the evacuate all residents within a 10-ernments - and at the Williamsburg meeting. Japan as well - have been declaring their unity of late may suggest the presence of at least some anxiety about how divided they seem. Reaffirmation at Brussels last week of the decision to install American intermediate-range Pershing and cruise missiles this year if there is no agreement with the Soviet Union to limit Soviet SS-20 deployment was unfortunately diluted just a bit by the acknowledgment that Greece was not signing and that the Folketing has qualified Danish support for the plan.

The West German, British and Netherlands commitments to the missile program are well known to face substantial domestic opposition. Questions of East-West trade and of technology exports to the East continue to cause inter-allied difficulties and have been discussed at the Atlantic Council meeting this week in Paris. Speaking generally, it may be said that European public confidence in U.S. policy is not as great today as it was before the administrations of Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, especially concerning arms control issues and Washington's approach to Moscow.

But it is not a membership requirement of NATO that one approve the whole of U.S. policy, nor that Americans approve all their allies do. It is not even necessary that every NATO member agree with the decision to deploy Pershings and cruises, so long as the principal powers, who bear the main responsibility, are in agreement.

The essential unity of NATO follows from the fact that its purpose is specific, limited and eminently necessary: to assure

The insistence with which the NATO gov- by mutual effort the security of Western Europe. This simplicity is its strength, a point that has not always been appreciated by those who have tried to make more of NATO and find more tasks for it. The fact that the Atlantic Council did meet in Paris at the invitation of France is evidence of this fundamental unity, which exists among governments otherwise deeply critical of one another on matters such as international monetary and economic policy, revolution in Central America and the role of the industrial nations in the Third World.

in the most important sense, then, the recent declarations of common purpose are not hollow claims. NATO, in fact, is a great deal stronger and more united than passing events may make it seem.

The Soviets constantly play on allied differences, as it does today on the missile question, but this strategy has never been successful and it is not proving a success today. The NATO deployment of Pershing-2s and cruise missiles is certain to go ahead unless serious concessions are soon made by the Soviet Union on its own deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles.

The NATO alliance continues to respond effectively to a real threat which is directly felt by people throughout the West European countries. That is why it works, and works well. NATO will change when the Soviet Union lifts that threat. Moscow could profitably begin to do so by lifting the specific threat produced by its unwarrantably large, and provocative, deployment of SS-20 nuclear missiles, aimed at the nations of Western Europe.

A Name for the '00s

"The sixties were a lot like the twenties," somebody was saying the other day. "That kind of vitality seems to run in 40-year cycles." If so, the next cycle will come up in the ... in the ... um, in the whats? The next decade will obviously be called the nineties, but what does one call the decade after that? A name will be necesary long before that decade dawns. One possibility is the oughts, as in the old-timer's "the winter of ought-seven." But that would ignite grammarians and purists: the very word, someone would quickly point out, arises from an error in juncture. In theory it is as silly to say "an ought" at it would be to say "an ewspaper." Then why not correct the term and call the decade the noughts? One reason is the potential for more argument, this time over spelling:

nought or naught? Fowler notes that nought is usually reserved for zero, leaving naught for poetic and rhetorical uses. Either way, the overriding connotation is discouragingly negative. Even if the years 2000 to 2009 should turn out to be dismal, why prejudge the decade as one that will come to nought/ naught What is left? The gap remains glaring, a vocabulary vacuum abhorred by nature. Our suggestion is the ohs. That would be accurate; each year in the decade has at least two O's in its name. And the ohs, with a connotation of wonder, would be fittingly optimistic for that start of a century. The one drawback is that someone seeking to make a point about federal deficits and debt might be tempted to spell it "the owes."

Maggie Closes An Era

By Flora Lewis

L ONDON — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's landslide re-election looks dazzling. This has to be written before the final count is in, but the statistics matter less than the sense already established that the vote is a watershed for Britain and, in a way, for Europe.

There is a paradox in the conclusions to be drawn. It has been an inward-looking, nationalistic cam-paign, with little sense of what is going on in the rest of the world. But that in itself is part of a pattern in the democracies, where crisis is driving vision down to a local focus.

At the same time, it is a signal from the country that first launched the idea of nonrevolutionary social-ism, with the Fabians in the 1920s. that the idea can go no further.

The philosopher Sir Isaiah Berlin, with the self-mocking wit that is the hallmark of continuing British civility, suggests it means that the country. terrevolution has arrived. In the last couple of years conservatives have been winning almost everywhere but in France. And in France the Socialists are in grave trouble precisely because they overestimated the public's desire for a radical change of society, and cannot deliver a painless cure for transformation.

One of the nice things about Brit-ish society is its intellectual toler-ance. Sir Isaiah, who is leftish, sees the demonstrative rebuff to Labor as a popular verdict of failure in its promise to deliver a better world. Peregrine Worsthorne, an arch-Tory publicist, sees the result of Labor success in achieving reform.

This is still a profoundly democratic country, for all the vivid rhe-floating middle and even the unemployed (polls estimate one in four jobless endorsed her), because nobody really believes she is going to abolish the welfare state. She couldn't. She can trim it, reshape it somewhat, shame it.

She cannot reverse profound changes that have occurred since World War II, and to which she contributed by enabling large num-bers of workers to become home owners. A lot more people have a stake in stability and keeping steady now, which is what Mr. Worsthome meant. Despite the re-cession, Labor's traditional supporters have acquired access to so-cial benefits they want to protect, while the party has succumbed to radical theories they do not share.

Pie in the sky has lost credibility. better-educated, better-anchored public has come to accept Mrs. Thatcher's homilies that you can't expect to consume what you don't turn a hand to produce. That, I think is what Sir Isaiah meant.

toric in the campaign. Mrs. Thatcher has won votes from the decisive Mrs. Thatcher does believe in her victorian values, "She considers the Mrs. Thatcher does believe in her idle rich just as reprehensible as the idle poor," is the characteristically stylish way Mr. Worsthorne puts it. It appeals because, like her or not, people consider her straightfor-ward. She gives a feeling of reliabili-ty and dedication to national as opposed to sectarian interest.

Of course, there are circumstantial factors. Labor ran a miserable, bickering campaign. The emergence of the alliance of Social Democrats and Liberals served primarily to split the opposition. The Conserva-tives' triumph, aided by favorable redistricting, is based on about the same percentage of less than half the total vote as Mrs. Thatcher's more modest win four years ago.

It remains to be seen what will happen to the Labor Party. It won't be the same. The alternatives are that the unrepentant left-wingers arguing for more audacity will take over completely and drive it to the fringe while the alliance begins to consolidate into an effective second party, or that it will regroup and seek the center-left again.

Completing An Afghan Settlement

By Selig S. Harrison

WASHINGTON — The United Nations mediation effort on Afghanistan has reached a make-orbreak stage. Although the emerging agreement is hardly ideal, it may offer the best hope for getting Soviet forces out and advancing U.S. interests in Southwest Asia.

After a year of quiet shuttle diplomacy, intensive negotiations in April between Pakistan. Afghanistan and a UN undersecretary-general. Diego Córdovez, have resulted in agreement on most provisions of a 20-page

"comprehensive settlement."

Moscow would be committed to a step-by-step withdrawal of combat forces and weaponry within a definite time period. Pakistan would be required to stop all support for the Afghan resistance, including weapons shipments through its territory.

Several critical issues remain to be several crucal issues remain to be settled when negotiations resume on June 16, notably the time frame of the withdrawal. Islamabad wants the pullout completed in six months. while Moscow holds out for 18, But. much to the Reagan administration's surprise, the UN effort is tantalizingly close to successful conclusion.

The issue before Washington is no longer whether a settlement is possi-ble but whether the type envisioned would be acceptable. America, the Soviet Union and China would have to endorse the agreement before it could be implemented.

The most controversial aspect of the settlement scenario is that it does not provide for replacement of the Soviet-installed Babrak Karmal regime. Moscow contends that the regime could survive without support from Soviet forces if "foreign interference" were stopped.

This is highly doubtful however. because Mr. Karmal has become the symbol of the occupation. But the agreement would give the Soviets a face-saving opportunity to phase him out while shaping a more effective, decentralized Soviet-oriented regime.

Moscow and Kabul are offering Afghanistan's diverse ethnic groups more autonomy than they enjoyed under the monarchy, including exemption from virtually all taxation. What could emerge initially from the UN scenario is a political hybrid: a Sovietized mini-state in Kabul and environs coexisting uneasily with a largely undisturbed countryside.

So long as the Kabul regime is "friendly," Soviet sources suggest. Moscow does not much care how it governs. A "friendly" government is defined as one that would retain Soviet military advisers and could be 'relied on to invite Soviet forces back in the event of a military emergency in Iran or Afghanistan itself.

If the negotiations fail, Moscow is likely to make a greatly intensified military effort to crush the resistance. Thus, America faces a stark choice . between supporting the agreement or watching helplessly as the resistance is decimated in future years.

Washington no longer has the op-on of increasing aid to the resisttion of increas ance, because Pakistan is not prepared to cooperate. It fears that escalated fighting would multiply the Afghan refugees in Pakistan. President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq recognizes that Moscow could easily destabilize his narrowly based regime.

This has led Pakistan to insist on a mutual noninterference clause that . would prohibit Afghan manipulation of Pashtun and Baluch separatism in Pakistan just as it would bar Pakista-ni support for the Afghan resistance. Publicly, most resistance factions denounce the agreement, pledging to fight on until all Soviet influence iseradicated. Privately, many noncommunist Afghans accept the Pakistani successfully for months to organize a argument that the first objective should be to get Soviet forces out. The Soviet Union already faced a

America should encourage Pakistan to get the best bargain it can, but not stand in the way of a settlement. A Soviet withdrawal would serve U.S. security interests in the Gulf region and South Asia. In the event of a crisis involving movement of Soviet forces through Afghanistan, Washington would have much more warning time than now.

The agreement would help to stabilize South Asia by removing the Afghan conflict as a bone of contention between India and Pakistan.

ONDON - The British election campaign iust finished was excruciatingly bad in so many ways that one wishes every single wide-eyed American reformer who argues that U.S. politics and government would be oh so much better if we just did things the British way had been over here to share this experience.

It would shatter all his or her illusions, starting with the widespread notion that it is silly to conduct campaigns for two years when the British can do the job in four weeks.

The belief that a four-week campaign is an ideal instrument for drawing forth the issues and testing the candidates may once have had some validity. It may have been true when parliamentary candidates quietly toured their constituencies, discussing matters, one on one or in small groups, with the voters. But put a short, intensive campaign into today's high-tech setting, dominated by television and the polls, and the result is an echo-chamber bediam from which all reasonable people flee in horror.

During the first half of America's two-year presidential campaigns, the contenders are no more than offstage noises. Even during the primaries, they are no more than a Tuesday night misance on television. From Labor Day to election day they demand a bit more attention but still share the stage with the World Series and college and professional football.

But in the four-week British campaigns there is no escaping the politicians. They are on the tube morning, noon and night, with press con-ferences, interviews, phone-ins and debates, long blocks of time on the early and late news, and a batch of 5-, 10- and 15-minute party propaganda programs, broadcast free by every channel The Sunday Times published a poll confirming my impression that people were choking on the force-led television electioneering. Only 3 percent said they wished there were more; more than 50 percent said "too much." Speaking of polls, that is another area of wretched excess. Like vitamins, they come at least one a day; there were seven last Sunday. Robert Worcester, one of the leading pollsters, did 43 in four weeks for nine different clients.

Ivor Crewe, one of the best of the polling analysts, developed Crewe's Third Law: "The more implausible the result of a poll, the more attention it will receive." And what is true of polls is equally true of issues. The static level is so high in these brief campaigns that any statement that is not absurd tends to be ignored.

You think British campaigns require politicians to "talk sense" to the voters? You should have been here during the four days consumed in deciding whether Labor's Dennis Healey was a rotter or just a fool to have accused Prime Minister Thatcher of "reveling in slaughter" during the Falklands war. It made Jimmy Carter's Playboy interview seem like high-level stuff.

Another myth shattered by these elections was the belief that the British system provides a much clearer policy mandate than America's.

Margaret Thatcher's government was as coy about its future plans as Richard Nixon was in 1972. Her opponents were never able to force her into talking about the real choices to be faced, on raising taxes, or cutting services or borrowing more deeply — or of her plans, if any, for curing unemployment. All those decisions were put off until after the elections.

gap still waiting to be bridged.

Thoughtful Britons on both sides

Mrs. Thatcher, like any American president with a lead in the polls, treated the opposition contemptuously. Her behavior was encouraged by the absurdity of the British electoral system which builds an exaggerated parliamentary ma-jority on a plurality of the popular vote; which, in effect, junks the majority of ballots, by the winner-take-all rule in a three-way race; and which penalizes most heavily the middle-road party with the most evenly distributed support. Even the supposed British advantage of producing highly competent party leaders, fully capable of becoming prime minister, was de-bunked this year. Michael Foot was an embarrassment to Labor and Roy Jenkins proved less than effective for the Alliance. The most admired leader, David Steel, came from the party with the fewest seats. And this is supposed to be the model? Don't you believe it.

It has been posed repeatedly on both sides of the Atlantic since 1976. It seems, rather, that Prof. Kristol has not considered any but the conventional Cold War answer: that they are for a first-strike capability and/or nuclear blackmail.

While even more open-minded people concede that the SS-20 is a foul, threatening asnd unnecessary weapon, they have been able to place it in the context of mutual suspicion in which one side feels the need to replace "antiquated" weapons while missile, which, like the SS-20, is also the other views such modernization as a destabilizing threat that must in turn be countered. I would refer Prof. Kristol to a De-

It was overdue, the report argued, in light of an aging, vulnerable missile system and the corresponding modernization of certain

U.S. Court Red-Faced, Not for the First Time

By Fred Barbash Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court apologized Wednesday when it announced it would not rule on what may be the most dence seized illegally must be excluded from criminal trials. The justices said they had picked the wrong case.

It was not that they could not agree on the answer. They are expected to do that in another case, possibly in the court's next term. Many court observers believe that, given the right case, a majority of the nine justices will vote to allow the admission of illegally seized evidence in cases when police reason-ably believed the seizure was legal. This is called a "good faith" exception to the exclusionary rule.

Six members of the court have complained publicly about the current operation of the exclusionary rule. Pressure to modify the rule is high, coming from the White House, Congress and the law enforcement community.

So the court picked a case, Illi-nois vs. Gates, though dissenters among the justices insisted it was the wrong case. The court twice heard arguments in the case and twice had new legal briefs submitted, a lengthy process that is expensive to all involved. The justices fi-nally acknowledged Wednesday that the suit did not directly address the issue of the exclusionary

This was one in a series of such episodes over the past few terms, and the second on a major case this term. Illinois vs. Gates, like many ex-clusionary-rule cases, involves drugs. Police in Illinois received an anonymous letter alleging that Lance and Sue Gates were going to bring a load of drugs from Florida. Officers obtained a warrant, searched the Gates's home and found drugs.

The Illinois courts threw out the evidence, saying it had been ob-tained illegally because the warrant was based primarily on the anonymous letter. It was not sufficient to show the probability of criminal activity, as is required by the Fourth Amendment to the Constiuntion, the state courts said.

The justices finally decided that the issue in the case was the legality of the warrant, not the exclusionary rule.

Moore at the Met; Master Burrower

By John Russell

New York Times Service NEW YORK — Not since the enormous exhibition in Florence in 1972 has Henry Moore's of Henry Moore if so many people work been seen in such strength did not harbor the delusion that outside his own country as in the they know all about him. For major retrospective exhibition of his sculptures and drawings at the Metropolitan Museum.

Moore the sculptor and Moore the man have a very large American constituency. It is now half a century since discerning Americans began to collect his work. What is more, they keep coming. (Some-times it seems as if there are Americans who cannot get out of bed in the morning until they have bought a Henry Moore.) Over and over again he has been the No. 1 choice for a big new public commission in the United States. Many thousands of Americans in cities and towns and on campuses big and small pass a monumental Moore every day of their lives. More than any other artist of our own time, he has been brought out of the museum and into the open and offered the gift of ubiquity.

Nor is it simply an American ubiquity. Walking toward the Houses of Parliament in London, we see a big Henry Moore. Coming out of the Karlskirche in Vienna, we see a big Henry Moore. Hurrying across Lincoln Center, we see a big Henry Moore. On our way to a is the carving in which he has litermeeting at the headquarters of UNESCO in Paris, we see a big Henry Moore. In fact, we may end up thinking that the only way to avoid seeing a big Henry Moore is to stay bome and hide under the call for a new music.

For all these reasons it might be better for the immediate reputation make no mistake — it is a delusion. Henry Moore has been a practicing artist for more than 60 years. During that time he has worked long hours virtually every day, and whereas the public Moore is on view the world over, the private Moore has produced a huge body of work, much of it known only to the specialist and some of it known to hardly anyone. It is the ambition of this survey, organized by William S. Lieberman, chairman of the museum's Department of 20th Century Art, to set the record

A good way to do this is to concentrate above all on work that came directly from the artist's hand — carvings in wood and sculpture, drawings and small-scale maquettes that may or may not have been enlarged later. No matter how sensitive to the artist's ishes a foundry may be, there is a difference in intimacy between the big-scale bronze and the maquette that speaks, or seems to speak, for the span of the hand and the indi-vidual pressure of fingers and Even more personal to the artist ally burrowed into the wood, or into the stone. It so happens that many of the sculptors now most in favor in this country are builders, not burrowers, and it may even be that Americans in general are a building people, rather than a burrowing people. The distinction is a fundamental one, as to which much may be said on both sides. Building is a positive, external, constructive and optimistic act. To burrow is to risk oneself in quite reason there are people who say another way. Building, we reach "I've had it up to here with Henry for the sky. A Touch of P.G. Wodehouse

By Souren Melikian nional Herold Tribune

ONDON - Auction sales with a touch of P.G. Wodehouse extravaganza are infrequent occurrences. None ever came closer to that definition than the four-day affair conducted by Christie's at Godmersham Park in Kent, eight miles from Canterbury.

Everything about it was Wodehousian, starting with the historic country house itself. While Godmershan Park is undoubtedly an important house, where one of the great writers of Georgian England, Jane Ansten, spent long periods writing some of her best-known novels such as "Mansfield Park." it was also transformed in the 1930s in a manner worthy of America as

On the excuse of restoring it to its original gran-deur, the structure was virtually gutted in 1936. Doors were shifted from one end of a room to another, a whole Doric porch was removed from one side of the house, to be re-erected as a "folly" 300 yards away on top of a hillock, and the better part of a wing was shorn off because it did not look "nice."

Above all, the whole house was redecorated to suit the wishes of New York-born Elsie Richter and her husband Robert Tritton, who had a professional interest in interior decoration and furniture.

Seeing Godmersham Park just before the objects were removed was a bit like walking into a film set of the 1930s. Underneath the faded veil left by the passage of time, all the rooms had that uniform look of any décor worked out from scratch - there were too my salmon-pink lampshades, the hangings in neo-18th-century style were a shade too elaborate.

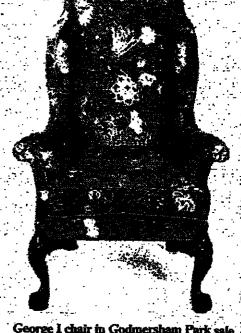

Not surprisingly, there were few great pieces. One of the grandest, perhaps, was an outstanding George I gilt wood chandelier that sold for £44,000 (about $27,800) on the first day. Another absolute rarity was a pair of tapestries attributed to John Vanderbank, who was in charge of the Royal Great Wardrobe in Soho between 1689 and 1727. These, understandably, went up to £41,800. A prominent English furniture dealer said he could not remember when he had last seen such a pair in the trade. Add to that a superb Queen Anne gilt-gesso armchair — £12,960 — a very good pair of early George III mahogany commodes with serpentine front — £25,920 — an admirable carved mahogany library armchair, also of the George III period - £8,600 - four or five other lots, and that

These are not really the makings of a great sale. The extraordinary thing is that, despite the small number of admirable objets d'art, brilliant commercial promotion turned the auction into a memorable event. A thick hard-bound catalog with entries that did not say a great deal — since in most cases there was little to be dwelt on — was part of it. In the main, however, personal contacts did the trick.

Two days before the sale, as I expressed a certain disappointment to Charles Beyer, Christie's furniture expert in the United States, who had just arrived from New York, his answer was: "I have reason to believe you will be surprised by the prices." How true.

Three minutes had barely elapsed at the first session on Monday, when inexplicable things started happening. A George II gilt-wood longstool jumped to £34,560, quadrupling Christie's highest estimate without any obvious reason. The next lot sold for except sit as heavily upon us as they sit upon the earth. The nervous energy of the piece that can be held beplaced by a slow steady vibration actly the same price. price and intrinsic quality — including the degree of rarity — was forgotten. A French gilt-wood side table of the early 18th century went up to £91,800, easily four times the highest conceivable price the most expensive dealer would dure ask for it. This was acquired by an American buyer, Mrs. Carol Petrie, who is rarely seen at auction.

This freakish price was not the only one. A George I annohair upholstered in floral petit-point needle-work and sold for £84,000 can easily be considered to have fetched four times the maximum value a professional might put on it. The same unidentified buyer paid £48,600 for a George III mahogany armchair, a beautiful piece but far from unique. Here, the price was four times Christie's higher estimate and, according to an English dealer who requested not to be iden-tified, two and a half times the highest possible price

A Queen Anne gold and lacquer center table with lobed top was knocked down at £48,600 — "It would be a miracle if we sold that at our shop for £25,000," the same dealer whispered. A George I green and gold-lacquered bureau-cabinet fetched £81,000, easily three times such a piece would go for in the trade. However, when asked about the effect such prices might have or his business, another high-powered London dealer re-plied "None whatsoever." There is little doubt that he

What made such prices possible was the attendance of an unusually high number of new or relatively new buyers with a taste for good objets d'art but only the slightest acquaintance with the art market in general and the auction game in particular. The atmosphere of what struck them as the epitome of an English comtry house conditioned them to accept prices unheard of before, prices that they might have been reluctant to offer in any other context.

The illusion created by what had once been a great house and by the name of Jane Austen - despite the fact so little looked like anything Jane Ansten must have seen — was enough. The Hollywoodian remake of the 1930s, far from having an adverse effect, made it all more familiar to part of the attendance, who bought Old World relies rather like Alice in Wonder-

Allies of U.S. Quick to Express Disappointment After Summit

ONN - Less than two weeks after the Williamsburg Declaration,) the fragile truce reached at the summit conference between Presient Ronald Reagan and his European allies seems to be unraveling

European leaders are rtually unanimous in believing that the deficits are causing U.S. interest ites to rise, and with them lending rates in Europe, threatening to nip a ider economic revival in the bud.

British leaders have been preoccupied with the national elections. In aly, too, the campaign for the next elections is under way, and the focus lines by almost 2 to 1. The Dow on internal causes of the country's economic malaise.

But Boun clearly failed to get the commitment it wanted from Mr.

Reagan, and an unaccustomed sense of skittishness is spreading as West German interest rates begin to climb again.

As disappointment spreads, the official rhetoric seems to be shifting toward putting Europe's own house in order so as to shield it from the effects of budget problems in the United States.

Chance to Show Unanimity

The next opportunity for a show of European economic unanimity will come June 29 and 30, when the 10 leaders of the European Comm hold their own annual summit conference in Stuttgart. They face a staggering agenda, from their own ailing economies — especially the cardinal issue of the EC budget — to seemingly intractable problems such as unemployment and the weakness of the European steel industry.

West Germany's leaders, who now hold the EC presidency, have scrambled to achieve a measure of agreement on how to balance rapidly rising expenditures with legally fixed limits on the community's income, which some say is edging the group toward economic and perhaps political bankruptcy. cal bankruptcy.

Concern with U.S. fiscal and monetary problems may have forced European leaders to unite for Williamsburg, as a result of a real or a perceived U.S. threat, but in Stuttgart they will be left to themselves, without Ronald Reagan on whom to focus.

Prices Up Broadly On NYSE

NEW YORK - Positive news about the U.S. economy helped prices on the New York Stock Exchange close higher Friday despite continued investor concern about growth in the U.S. money supply and the course of interest rates.

Dutch Entering Final Phase Of Huge Sea Barrier Project

By Amiel Kornel International Herald Tribune

ZIERIKSEE, Netherlands — After enduring thousands of years of abuse, Dutch patience with North Sea storms has grown thin. The Netherlands is beginng the final stage of construction of the dam of dams, the world's largest storm-surge barrier.

The last phase of work on the $1.9-billion barrier is starting this month. It is the last and most spectacular phase of a 30-year plan to protect the low-lying southwestern coast from the sea's violent outbursts. The dam, to be finished in 1986, is probably the most complex civil engineering feat ever attempted. In addition to the country's security, the Netherlands' reputation for engineering excellence is also at stake.

But its size, cost and complexity have plunged the project into controversy almost since its inception.

The traveller crossing the coastal province of Zeeland encounters a starkly beautiful landscape carved by Europe's rivers, flattened by the sea and repeatedly reclaimed by man. Seemingly interminable land-filled dikes follow the coasts of the islands that fill the estu-ary created by the Rhine, Maas and Schelde rivers. Towering cumulus clouds that roll in off the North Sea and tall windmills provide visual counterpoints to the region's flatness. Nature has saddled the province with a problem more menacing than its unpredictable weather and sea: The land is sinking. Like more than a quarter of

It is at least as slowly as last year's. The dams eliminated tidal movement and altered the salinity and temperature of the water in the artificial lakes they created. As the area's delicate ecological balance was upset, fisheries and a rich variety of bird and plant life were endangered.

The revised and much more costly plan that was adopted as a result of the complaints calls for the construction of a mobile storm-surge barrier containing steel gates that will be left open in fair weather and closed as storms approach.

Even the revised plan has not avoided controversy, however. "This barrier is only a compromise," said Ben Jensen, a journalist with the Provinciale Zeeuwse Courant, a regional newspaper. He said that because the barrier will reduce tidal movement by almost 25 percent, many local fishermen and environmentalists are "still not quite happy." They would prefer to simply continue the ancient process of building up the the Netherlands. Zeeland is already below sea level

Producer Prices Up 0.3% in U.S.; First 1983 Rise

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rising energy costs raised U.S. wholesale prices 0.3 percent in May, the first increase this year, the Labor Department reported Friday. For the first five months of 1983, producer prices fell at an annual care of 2.2 prices. es fell at an annual rate of 2.2 per-cent. Producer prices were up 3.7

percent last year. Largely responsible for the May increase was a 2.2-percent increase in energy prices, which had fallen for the five previous months. Home heating oil prices were up 6.4 percent, the largest increase since March 1981. Gasoline prices climbed 2.3 percent, the most since July 1982. In April, energy prices fell 2.8 percent.

Food prices in May were down 0.5 percent after having risen the previous three months, the Labor Department said in releasing its Producer Price Index for finished goods. This was the sharpest fall in food prices since July 1982, when they fell 1.6 percent.

The May increase in prices was forecast by economists, but the experts had been expecting an even bigger jump. They also were looking for further rises in the months ahead, but said the increases would likely be only temporary, not a sign of a fresh surge in inflation.

The May report supported anarise at least as slowly as last year's. One expert forecast an increase of less than I percent, which would be the smallest since the mid-1960s.

The bright inflation picture has been widely attributed to the sharp recession and the worldwide oil glut, which depressed gasoline and fuel oil prices. Those prices have started to stabilize recently.

Gasoline prices fell for eight consecutive months before turning around in May, the department said. Natural gas prices were down 0.6 percent, less than the 3.5 percent in the previous report. (The department's energy price calculations lag a month; Friday's results represent April prices.)

The May price increase of 0.3 percent, after seasonal adjustment, compared with 0.1-percent declines in March and April, and matched

U.S. M-1 Rises By $100 Million

NEW YORK — The basic measure of the U.S. money supply, M-1, rose $100 million in the week ended June 1, the Federal Reserve reported Friday after the markets had closed. The increase was much less than expected.

In addition, the Fed said M-2, a wider measure of the money supply, was up $23 billion in May, which is about what analysts had

The Fed also revised its report of the previous week's decrease in M-I, which measures cash in circulation and money in checking ac-counts, to show a decrease of $800 million rather than the decrease of Friday's report said that, for the 12 months that ended in May. vholesale prices rose 2.3 percent.

Before the report was released Joseph Hurd, an economist at Crocker National Bank in San Francisco, said a sizable increase in wholesale prices in the months ahead would not be "disturbing or a sign of renewed inflation."

"It's far too early for worries about inflation," he said. Allen Sinai, senior economist at Data Resources in Lexington, Massachusetts, said of the increase: "It's essentially transitory."

Big Advances Signaled by Chip Makers

Gains in Circuitry Extend Prospects for Broad Recovery

vanced Micro Devices was the initial equity purchase of the IOG fund—the first involving de-monstrable nonsense about the Japanese dominating integrated circuitry markets, and the second relating to the growing signifi-cance of microchips in driving al-most everything else in todoy's economy. Alarmist theories about the Japanese had helped drive the issue down to the split-adjust-ed equivalent of less than $11 as we first bought in February, 1982; and we subsequently stated we were buying deeplynear $3 because it would be saved by technologies such as CAD/CAM and robotics which have been evolving apace with circuitry designs and capabilities. Harvester quadrupled in its first recovery drive; Advanced Micro has quintupled; and additional cir-cuitry breakouts of last week induded Motorola topping $130 (from $50 when first pruchased) and Notional Semiconductor get-ting to $42 from as low as $14 during the Japanese-takeover panic. As for what can be expected now to happen to Cincinnati Milacron, Gerber Scientific and Milocron, Gerber Scientific and other factors cought up in a mo-jor new industrial revolution, we invite you to read forthcoming IOG Equity Growth reports which will be mapping out strategies for new bull-market waves which the clarmists and crash theorists have been overlooking completely. ON a screne and dazzling California morning, the air fragrant with orange blossoms, the light shimmering and misty with the smoke of sprinklers, I left the sheltered halls of learning for a Wanderjahr in Europe. I had kissed a few girls, and had read a few books, including The Decline of the West, by Oswald Spengler, to whom I had written to question his assumption that the West had de-clined west of the Missouri River. Of east of the Missouri I hesitated to speak, but of the west I had.

personal experience. To this letter he had not re-plied, but perhaps he needed time to think it over.

whether this passage reflects a romantic nature, but it certainly betrays a naive one with a distinctly

This is confirmed when, a bit further on in the book, Morris admits that a violent storm he experi-

SPORTS Vilas Affair Points Up Tennis Credibility Problem

By Neil Amdur

New York Times Service NEW YORK - The decision by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council to suspend Guillermo Vilas of Argentina for one year represents a bold attempt to restore credibility to a $25 million prize-money circuit that seems heading out of control.

Published reports of large-scale appearance guarantees to top-rank-ing players, excessive code-of-con-duct violations on the court and a current legal suit involving the touncil and a rival organization, World Championship Tennis, have left the men's tour in its most chaotic condition since the open era began 15 years ago.

Singling out the 30-year-old Vilas for having accepted illegal appearance money at a Grand Prix tournament in Rotterdam last March was the council's strongest reprimand against an individual player. The severity of the ruling against Vilas, along with the 42-day suspension leveled against Yannick Noah of France on Tuesday, appears designed to put other male stars on notice that they risk more than minor fines and brief suspensions for future infractions.

"This is a time we all knew was coming in that there were unclarified issues that were also unresolved," said Arthur Ashe, the former player and long-time council member, who recently resigned his position. "Sooner or later these issues had to be resolved, and we all knew it wouldn't be done peaceful-

McEnroe, Connors, Lendl Speak Out

LONDON — The world's top three tennis stars have defended Guillermo Vilas against the year's suspension and $20,000 fine imposed on him Wednesday by the Men's International Profession-

John McEnroe, who holds the No. 1 ranking, and Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl, ranked second and third, respectively, each said Thursday that they thought the suspension was unfair.

"Something will definitely happen fairly soon," Connors said. "You can't stop Vilas making a living on the Grand Prix circuit."

McEnroe promised to make a stand on behalf of his Argentine friend. He did not specify what he would do, but said he would make a statement after Wimbledon, which begins later this month. "I want to talk to my father about it, and find out more of the facts, and establish the feelings of other players," McEnroe said.

Lendl asked: "How can you say what is a guarantee and what is not a guarantee? It is quite wrong to suspend one man for what is going on, so long as the game is professional."

McEnroe, Connors and Lendl made their comments during the tournament at London's Queen's Club, where they are tuning up for Wimbledon Vilas will not miss Wimbledon because he has 30 days in which to file an appeal.

Connors, meanwhile, beat Steve Denton, 6-2, 6-, on Friday to reach the semifinals at the Queens Club. He will play Lendi, who beat Tim Mayotte, 7-6, 7-6. Kevin Curren ended the hopes of Pat Cash, who had upset Vitas Gerulaitis, by beating the 18-year-old Australian, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. Curren plays McEnroe, who beat Brian Gottfried, 6-0, 6-1.

The lack of uniformity in the rules has been a major drawback to the council's effectiveness. Van Winitsky, an American touring pro, was recently suspended for five weeks for an incident involving spectators during an event in Antigua last year. Bench to Retire Following Season

CINCINNATI - Johnny Bench, whose powerful arm and potent bat earned him acclaim as one of baseball's greatest catchers, announced Friday that he will retire from baseball at the end of the Speaking at a news conference on the field at Riverfront Stadium, Bench said he has lived a 'boy's dream" and plans now to play golf, hunt and fish. "I decided about three weeks ago to retire." Bench said. "It just wasn't as much fun for me. I wasn't playing to the degree that I accepted."

Bench, 35 years old and in his 17th season with the Cincinnati Reds, has set several standards for catchers since he broke into the big leagues amid fanfare in 1967. He was chosen for the 1968 National League All-Star team, the first of 13 straight years to be so honored. But Bench has slowed down in recent years, and last season gave up catching to play the infield.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) - The coaching picture in the National Basketball Association continued to change Friday as Morris McHone was promoted from assistant coach to head coach of the San Antonio Spors a day after Mike Fratello was named to coach the Atlanta Hawks. McHone, 39, served for the last three years as assistant to Stan Albeck and became the chief candidate for the top position when Albeck left the Spurs to take over the New Jersey Nets on Wednesday. , Fratello, 36, who was an assistant coach in Atlanta before moving to the New York Knicks last season as an assistant, replaces Kevin Loughery, who quit Monday to coach the Chicago Bulls.

Hallberg Leads Westchester Golf

HARRISON, New York (UPI) — Gary Hallberg chipped in from 35 yards for one birdie and sank a 50-foot putt for another, lifting him to a 4-under-par 67 Thursday that gave him a one-shot lead after the opening round of the Westchester Classic golf tournament:

Almost as important as the two big birdies was the running monologue of his playing partner, Fuzzy Zoeller, who provided Hallberg with a mental boost while beloing himself to a roller-coaster round of 68, where he was tied with David Peoples and Chip Beck. "Fuzzy's a real loose guy," Hallberg said. "He's out there cracking jokes all the time. If I had a problem, it was getting up tight and a little impatient, and he kind of helped me out with that without knowing it."

Miami Standout Kelly Joins USFL

HOUSTON (UPI) — Jim Kelly, a record-setting University of Miami quarterback and the first-round draft choice of the NFL Buffalo Bills, has signed an estimated $3.5-million contract with the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League.

The Gamblers also signed Kelly's roommate of three years at Miami, nunning back Mark Rush, who was a fourth-round choice of the National Football League's Minnesota Vikings.

"There are risks in doing what I'm doing, but I made up my mind," Kelly said about shunning the established NFL to take his chances with the newly formed USFL. "Everybody has to take a risk once in his life. But I'm happy I did it and I won't regret it."

Bullish on the Law

WASHINGTON — It may be fee for another lawyer who has to young person I meet this June is graduating from law school. The Harlan McCugh, a senior partner with McCugh, McCugh & Moore McCughs, is one of those never have enough lawyers to serve the needs of the people.

The reason why I'm so bullish on the law as a profession is that the more lawyers you have the more business you generate for and said he had a paralegal draw each other. We're the ones who up the agreement and hadn't realmake the problems for other law- ized the young man had written it yers to solve."

"Well, there is a samous story about a lawyer in North Dakota to charge my client my normal outwho hung up his shingle in town and was starving to death. Then another lawyer moved in and hung denly they were both prospering.
The rule of thumb in America is lawyers," McCugh said, "is that almost every family in America has a most every family in America has a up a shingle across the street. Sudstreet before one can make any McCugh continued, "The beauty of the American justice system is that one doesn't have to do anything wrong to have need of a lawyer. All somebody has to do is accuse you of doing something wrong, and then you have to seek legal help to defend yourself. Even if you aren't accused of doing something wrong, it's best to hire a lawyer in advance, just in case somebody might take a gamble that you did.

Another reason why I'm bullish are taught to write contracts and legal papers that can only be decoded by other lawyers. So when one lawyer draws up a contract, he confusing everyone as to what the or she is automatically assuring a

Historic Salvage Planned

CAIRO - The Egyptian government has approved a French plan to salvage as many as 13 wrecks of, the fleet that brought Napoleon and his army to Egypt in 1798, the newspaper Al-Akhbar reported. my imagination, but every read it and see that the person signing it is not getting a raw deal.

"I had an instance not long ago question is how many lawyers can where a lawyer for a motion-picthe country support? The answer is ture studio sent a one-page contract to a screenwriter I was representing. I took one look at it and became furious. I called up the studio lawyer and said, 'Are you crazy who believes the United States will or something? My client could sign this contract today. Where the hell did you study law?

"The studio lawyer apologized in plain English. He promised to "I'm not too sure I understand." send over the studio's usual 170page contract right away. As soon as I got it, we started haggling over it for three months, and I was able rageous fee. You were smart not to let your client sign the one-page contract, don't even have to leave your house anymore to find one. Now when a mother calls up her lawyer son from the hospital and says, 'I fell on the sidewalk and broke my hip, the first question he usually asks her is, 'Were there any witnesses?'

"There aren't enough lawyers in America to handle all the accidents that are happening all around us, much less the insurance companies who are refusing to pay."

"You paint a very rosy picture for young people just coming out of law school," I said. "I'm not making it up," McCugh told me. "You've got government lawyers working day and night legislators had on their minds when hey passed a law, or repealed one. You have people being poisoned by chemicals, crime is soaring, and the simplest business transaction cannot be consummated without two legal minds in the middle screwing it up. I would say the outlook for the law class of 1983 has never been brighter.

"What a wonderful message.

A 'Spiritual Disneyland' in Detroit

Heirs of the Auto Assembly Line Invest in Hare Krishna

By Curt Suplee Washington Post Service DETROIT — The face of the god is bright blue of course. So is the lustrous skin on his four arms. Just as you'd ex-pect in any image of Krishna in Bombay or Bengal. But this stat-ue of the Hindu deiry is 5 feet tall, fashioned from acrylic resins, illumined by computer-driven light banks and speaking through speakers. And it is standing in the middle of East Detroit, down the road from the scabrous urban wrack around the old Chrysler plant in a neighborhood of square brick

a pair of high-response stereo

The statue is the highlight of the Hare Krishna movement's latest acquisition, the Bhaktivedanta Cultural Center, housed in the fabled Fisher Mansion and now open to the public at $3 a head.

The building, a Hollywoodish mongrel of Moorish, Italian Renaissance and Spanish styles, was built in 1927 by Lawrence (*Body by") Fisher, founder of Cadillac Motors. It passed to an heir sym-pathetic to the Hare Krishna cause, and in 1975 was purchased jointly for $300,000 by two movement devotees from once-hostile clans: Alfred Brush Ford (great-grandson of Henry Ford) and Elisabeth Reuther Dickmeyer (daughter of the late Walter Reuther, president of the United Anto Workers).

During the 1970s, Ford sank another $2 million into renovating the building and 4½ walled acres of grounds. Today it houses what one devotee calls "a spiritual Disneyland," featuring a "mul-timedia diorama exhibition" explaining the aims of Krishna consciousness and Govinda's, "Detroit's most exciting vegetarian

EXECUTIVE

Our founder always urged a union of Indian culture and Western technology," says Subhananda Das — formerly Steven Gelber, formerly Jewish, now the movement's pudgy and affable director for inter-religious af-fairs. Prabhupada said the United States and India were like a blind man and a lame man: The West spiritually blind, the East technically crippled. "What you see here is a manifestation of that idea, using modern computer present the message of the Bhagavad-Gita," the Hindu hoty text in which Krishna teaches the way to escape the wheel of death and rebirth by transcending the self and achieving inward detachment.

Fisher's phytocratic deco extravagance - coffered handpainted ceilings, acres of handlaid tile, walnut and rosewood parquet floors and pounds of pure gold-and silver leaf (even in the bathrooms, several of them large enough to park a Buick) are undisturbed. The devotee have simply superimposed their own icons. Cross-legged Hindu statues stare up at winged cheru-bim, and tiled walls are overhung with larid Hindu tapestries.

Alfred Ford sits with the absence of wriggle or gesture that characterizes most devotees. His tweed jacket and tie have a smug Savile Row look; and at 33, his chubby, mustached face hints a vestigial arrogance. He is surrounded by senior devotees, including Vishnupada, the 40ish spiritual leader of this and many other groups.

Ford (as Ambarish Das, he is ISKCON's director of cultural affairs) came to Krishna as a 19-year-old art student at Tulane University. "I was dumped from boarding school into the worst turbulence of the '60s," he says, just acting out of conditioning going around taking lots of drugs like all my friends."

Then he saw some devotees chanting, and bought "The Ra-dha Krishna Temple Album" with George Harrison. "The first time I heard it, it sounded so familiar. It made me believe I must have remembered it from previ-ous lifetimes."

Intrigued, he found that "no other religion gives you more information about God in detail. And it's very personal." He left Tulane without graduating, and beaded west, eventually arriving at Honolulu, where he met Pra-bhupada and Lisa Reuther, 35, who joined the movement, in which she is known as Lekhasravanti Dasi, in the early 1970s. He liked the Hawaii temple so much that "I bought it and still own it."

The money has posed prob-lems. On trips to India, he was treated with skepticism by the Indian press. "They asked me what I thought of capitalism, and I said, "Well, it's always been very good to me." But it does exempt him from the injunction to gather alms. "I collected mine in my last lifetime," he says.

Foreign Secretary Lord Curington who was made a companion of honor, one of the highest accolades. Lord Carrington, 63, who resigned last year to accept responsi-bility for Britain being caught una-wares by the Argentine seizure of the Falkland Islands, was praised as one of Britain's best foreign as one or suman's best foreign secretaries after being brought into government by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in 1979. His greatest thumph was bringing peace to the breaksway firitish colony of Rhodesia, negotiating a set-tlement between black nationalist guerrillas and Ism Smith's white minority regime to give birth to independent Zimbabwe. Cive Sinchir, 42, the electronics genius who pioneered the world's first packet calculator, was given a knighthood. His inventions, including the first pocket relevision and Britain's biggest-selling home computer, have made him one of Britain's richest men. The retiring Archbishop of York, Dr. Stuart Blanch, is one of four new life peers. Others are George Howard, retiring chairman of the British Broadcasting Corp., Sir John King, who piloted the state-owned British Ariways back to profit from a record £545-million (then $926-million) loss, and financies Sir James Hanson, Celebrities honored in the arts include the painter Lucian Frend, 60, who was made a companion of honor, the poet Stephen Spender and the Royal Ballet's principal choreogra-pher, Kenneth MacMillan, who were among 36 people to receive knighthoods. The British runner, David Moorcroft, 30, who lopped nearly six seconds off the world 5,000-meter record last year with a time of 13 minutes 42 seconds, was made a Member of the Order of the British Empire. Bill Rowling, prime minister of New Zealand in 1974-75, was made a Knight Com mander of the Order of Saint Michael and Saint George. He stepped down earlier this year as leader of the Labor Party in opposition. Trade Minister Peter Rees and Junior Defense Minister Peter.
